Everyone has the right to request the provision of digital accessibility of a website, mobile application, or any of their elements. You can also request information to be provided through an alternative access method, such as reading a digitally inaccessible document, describing the content of a video without audio description, etc. The request should include the requester's details, specify which website or mobile application it concerns, and provide contact information. If the requester indicates the need for information to be provided through an alternative access method, they should also specify a convenient way to present this information. The public sector entity should fulfill the request immediately, no later than 7 days from the date of the request. If meeting this deadline is not possible, the public sector entity shall promptly inform the requester when the request will be fulfilled, provided that the deadline may not be longer than 2 months from the date of the request. If providing digital accessibility is not possible, the public sector entity may propose an alternative access method for information. If the public sector entity refuses to fulfill the request for accessibility or an alternative access method for information, the requester may submit a complaint regarding the digital accessibility of the website, mobile application, or website or mobile application element. After exhausting the above procedure, you can also submit a request to the Commissioner for Human Rights.
